

Abstract

The invention relates to a gasket having at least one metallic layer, in which at least one gasket opening and at least one bead are formed, and in and/or adjacent to the bead a coating is applied as a deformation limiter, which comprises at least one filler and one bonding agent, the mass proportion of the filler being greater than the bonding agent and the filler being present in particle form, and the individual spherical particles having a small surface in relation to the volume of the particle.